ENERGY EFFICIENCY

Tip of the Month

If your home is more than 10 years old, it likely needs more insulation. How much depends on a variety of factors, most importantly where you live. For example, insulation for a home in the Northeast U.S. will have a higher R-value rating than a home in Southern California. Check out www.simplyinsulate.com to find out more.

LOCAL SPORTS ACTION

Members of the Mountain View-Gotebo football team and Coach Richardson, above, participated in CoachesAid Media Day in August. Information from the event will be used on the CoachesAid website, www.coachesaid.com, which provides an array of news articles, player interviews, team rankings, forums, and other details about high school sports in Oklahoma. The site is a great way for rural residents to keep up with their local team. For that reason Touchstone Energy Cooperatives signed on as a major sponsor of the website. Check it out!

INSIDE YOUR CO-OP

By Dennis Krueger
GENERAL MANAGER

Overcoming barriers

It's up to all of us to make a difference

It is time we begin to look inward regarding our electric bill and utility bills in general. The reality of the world is simple: Cheap energy is dwindling and it's time for us to change!

According to a recent survey by Deloitte Center for Energy Solutions of state energy regulations three points stood out in my mind:

1. Eight-five percent of state energy regulators are bracing for increased residential electricity costs next year. They based their opinion on expected environmental cost increases through regulatory changes at the Federal and state level and capital cost increases.
2. Sixty-eight percent of the state energy regulators said increase costs to consumers is the leading barrier to bring on more renewable energy online. In short, renewable energy is more expensive than traditional generation sources; but the cost of adding any new generation sources are expensive.
3. Fifty-one point four percent of the respondents to the survey ranked consumer energy efficiency as a way to reduce greenhouse gas emissions.

The average electric consumer at Kiwash Electric cannot influence the first two items in this survey; so we must concentrate on the third item—energy efficiency. This is our third year of the “Home Energy Makeover” contest and it is our way of introducing you to ways that can reduce your monthly bill.

Energy efficiency is one of the biggest contribution consumers can make to the energy landscape. Ironically, however, consumers themselves are often one of the biggest barriers to energy efficiency and conservation because they tend to under-invest in it.

"Consumers themselves are often one of the biggest barriers to energy efficiency and conservation because they tend to under-invest in it."

The onslaught of new ideas, technologies and designs are now helping to reverse that tendency by changing consumer habits. The wide-scale acceptance of the Energy Star appliances is a good example of changing habits using better technology. We can increase our learning curve by various methods, including but not limited to, making energy efficiency part of our everyday conversation, and finding energy saving tips by visiting our website at www.kiwash.coop, and then clicking on the house at the bottom of the page that says “Touchstone Energy Savers.”

What can you do to decrease your energy bill? Small changes can make a difference in your monthly electric bill. Easy things can make a difference. For example:

- Adjust the temperature of the water heater to 120°F.
- Quit recycling old refrigerators by placing them in the garage. Instead, haul those refrigerators off to the dump and replace them with an Energy Star appliance to save money.
- Fifteen inches of insulation in the attic is required to maximize your heating and cooling cost savings.
- When replacing your heating/cooling unit, a 16 SEER unit dramatically decreases your long-term energy consumption. Geothermal units are your best bet for efficiency. Again, do not under-invest in this area because heating and cooling your house typically accounts for 45 percent of your energy usage.

It's up to all of us to make a difference in this world by overcoming a few of our own barriers in life. If we begin to talk about energy savings, maybe we will influence enough people to consider changes that will affect our pocketbook and the environment. Think about it!

Celebrate Cooperative Month

October marks the 80th anniversary of Co-op Month

Because you buy electricity for your home or business from an electric cooperative, you have a lot to celebrate.

Electric cooperatives, like all cooperatives, operate using a unique business model. The centerpiece is the consumer, who owns the business.

That's right: Because you are a customer of your electric cooperative, you also are an owner. That gives you the right to vote for members of your cooperative's board of directors—and to run for the board if you want to.

Belonging to an electric cooperative means you have a say in the business. How many other businesses put their customers on the board?

Resolve to become more involved in your electric cooperative. Exercise your privileges as an owner of your local utility.

That's something worth celebrating!
